Hughes, Shanghai. Dated Kwang-su XVI., 12.4 (13th January 1891)-(Received loth January 1891.)

(Translation.) SIR, -I have the honour to inform you that on the 8th January His Exultency Shen: Superintendent of Trade for - the Southern Ports, in consequence of a report of the Taot a of Chinking on the burning of Messrs Butterfield and Swire's etcamor Shanghai, with frightful loss of life, instructed me to place myself in communication with you with a view to the framing of stringent Regulations for pretection against such disasters in the future, both as regards Chinese and as regardsforeign

I have also received from the Thotai of Chinking a despatch of the same tenor. The Regulations for protection against fire on both sea and river steamers were originally. I understood, extremely strict and complete. Passengers were notallowed to be guided merely by their ownindividual caprice in the matter of lighting fires and smoking tobacco, and cargo like matches was not allowed to be carried except under special restrictions. The result was, that fires were then of very rare occurrence.

With increase in the number of seamers employed to carry on trade between Chinese and foreigners, and the fall in freight and passage caused by competition, there has grown up a lax system of allowing passengers to smoke when, where, and how, they like, and of allowing them the greatest liberty, also, in all other respects. In order to attract custom. In fact so differently are matters managed now from the way in which they were under the old strict system, that even the coolies employed on the ship are allowed to go about smoking Japanese cigarettes and to throw them about anywhere they please. to become possibly the cause of a fire on board. This laxity in the matter of regulations has already resulted in accidents to two of the steamers, and the deth of a great number of people; first the Pac Ching, and afterwards the Shanghai having been burnt to the water's edge with circumstances of unparallelled horms.

It is evident that if the same causes are allowed to continue to exist, the same accidents will continue to occur; and it should be our business now to arrive at conclusion as to what Regulations must be enforced in order to ensure safety for the future. I am at present in communication with the Directors of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company on the subject. and I am also writing separately to each of the Consular representatives of foreign countries with a view to the compinies or merchants concerned being moved to give it their attention and take the necessary steps. I now have the honour to request into consideration the question of what measures shall be adopted in order to ensure the attainment of the end which we have in view. - Awaiting your reply, I have &c. de.

to the letter of the directors of the Electric Lighting Company, was sent in yesterday afternoon. Mr Sone regrets that he cannot act upon the auggestion of the Comrany and move for a fresh investigation into the cause of the fire. He repeats the statements previously made by him, and says that there cannot be the slightest doubt about the configration having broken out under the ceiling of the carridor outside one of the Committee Rooms, at the place where the electric wire passed, or about a second flune having made its appearance quickly afterwards in the corner of the Government Delegates' Room just below the c iling. DAVITT'S PAPER CONTAINS ANOTHER BITTER ATTACK ON PARNELL 4

London, December 23 .- Michael Davitt's newspaper, the Labor World, to-day renews its onslaught upon Parnell. The Labor World says that Parnell is a greater danger to Ireland than any outside enemy. N foreign force has ever so endangered Irenulous enemy of liberty and democracy, who attacks Ireland's honor in its most vital part, and who betrayed the trust of honor committed to his care. The Labor World, continuing, says that Parnell should not be permitted to hold the power which
